MEDICINAL.

spring sight in the world than the picture of the stalwart young farmer and his rosy cheeks and wife starting out to fight the battle of life. There is no reason why all such couples should not live long, happy, healthy lives. Much depends upon the wife herself. To some extent, she must be a jack of all trades, and a little of a harness maker, and a little of a veterinarian surgeon as well as a farmer. It is the same with town, and she must have a handy hand at many things. It is possibly many miles to the first physician, and the farmer's wife should be able to take that every member of the family is in good health.

If the young farmer's wife is wise, when her husband says that he is out of sorts, when he is suffering from biliousness or indigestion, she will not permit him to neglect these disorders, but will have at hand Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This wonderful medicine is not a cure-all, but as most ailments have their inception in a torpid liver and a disordered digestion, it is a cure for a great many of them. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion and assimilation perfect, the liver active, the blood pure and the nerves steady. It cures all malarial fevers, rheumatism, and medicine dealers sell it, and keep nothing else "just as good."

The farmer's wife may frequently save the life of her husband or that of one of her children by owning a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. It tells how to treat all the ordinary ills of life and how to cure for serious ailments cases which are beyond the skill of a physician. It contains 100 pages and over 300 illustrations. It is used to cost $1.50 a copy; now it is free. For a paper-covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, to the World Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. Clothing binding, 31 stamps. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and biliousness. They regulate and purify the stomach, liver and bowels. Household druggists do not recommend something else as "just as good."

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

The story of a daring and atrocious crime reached Havre de Grace, Tour-day by letter from Hannibal, Mo., addressed to Mr. W. J. Wilson, an uncle of the victim. The story reads as follows:

"On the evening of December 9 a negro called at the house of Mr. Chris Bapt, saying that he was very cold, and asked if he might come in to warm himself. Mr. Bapt gave consent, and he was admitted to the house, and made as comfortable as possible. After some time had elapsed Mr. Bapt asked the negro if he was not warm enough, and if so to please go out, as he (Mr. Bapt) had to feed his stock, and his wife being delicate, did not wish to be left with strangers.

"Mr. Bapt then went to the barn to feed the stock and was followed by the negro, asking him for money. Mr. Bapt replied that he did not have anything to give away, having used for all he had in his possession. Mr. Bapt then left the house, got some corn to feed his horse, which were in a pen up to the roof of the barn from the barn. The negro still followed him, and finally called to Mr. Bapt, 'Halt and throw up your hands, or I will shoot you!'

"Mr. Bapt was surprised, but did not direct. The negro watched him back to the house. Mrs. Bapt, seeing the negro with his revolver pointed at her husband's head, ran to the door, when she too was met with a pistol. Mr. Bapt and his wife were together in the barn, when the negro secured some binding twine, and compelling them to return again to the house with him, he made Mr. Bapt lie down.

"He then directed Mrs. Bapt to tie her husband's hands and feet. After this was done, he made an insolent proposition to Mrs. Bapt. He then turned to her husband, saying: 'What have you to say about it, any way?' Mr. Bapt replied, 'I will be satisfied if you will only spare our lives.'

He then turned to the wife and commanded her to get supper, but after the meal was prepared he would not permit either of the parents or their small children to partake of any, and only drank some coffee himself. After this he commanded Mrs. Bapt to help him to carry her husband into an adjoining room, and lay him on a bed.

"He then ordered Mrs. Bapt to comply with his wishes. She pleaded for mercy, but the negro threatened to kill the entire family if she refused.

"She was then subjected to gross indignities in the presence of the husband, who, being bound, was unable to render any assistance.

"When day came the negro arose and left the house.

"Mrs. Bapt, more dead than alive, ran across the fields to her brother's house, where she swooned. Finally she revived sufficiently to give the alarm. The brother secured a gun and started to assist those of the other family, but the negro, seeing him coming, hid behind a large elm tree, and as the brother came up rushed upon him with a revolver and told him to throw up his hands, which he did. He was marched back to his own home, the negro saying, 'What must I do to you? What ought I do to you?' As they drew near to the house his wife and the woman who had been assaulted, upon seeing the negro coming, ran for their lives.

"The negro's attention having been called, he turned to them, and fired three shots, none of them taking effect. By this time the brother had made good his escape. He ran into the house, secured his gun and fired one load at the negro, some of the shot taking effect, striking him in the face, and tearing one ear nearly off. The negro returned the shot, but, missing his mark, tore a large hole in the wall. The brother then fired again, this shot taking effect, tearing a hole in the negro's body, large enough to get one's fist in, and killing him instantly.

"By this time Mr. Bapt had freed himself from his bindings. He arose, bolted the doors, and securing a gun, started in pursuit, but met his brother, saying, 'I have got him.' They returned where the women were, and Mr. Bapt found his wife in a critical condition, owing to the torture she had undergone at the hands of the black fiend."

Persons who are troubled with indigestion will be interested in the experience of Wm. H. Penn, chief clerk in the railway mail service at Des Moines, Iowa, who writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the merits of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For two years I have suffered from indigestion, and am subject to frequent severe attacks of pain in the stomach and bowels. One or two doses of this remedy never fails to give perfect relief.
